"MYSTERY MAN" IS INVOLVED BY DEFENDANTS IN LIQUOR ACTION

James E. Tawney, Gettysburg R. 3, and William Marshall Williams and Coy Rex Shaw, both of North Wilkesboro, N. C., have denied any knowledge of the operations of a still in Straban Twp. which led to their facing seven counts of liquor law violations in Adams County court Monday and today.

They allege that they were innocent persons engaged in other pursuits which put them on the farm near Hunterstown where a raid uncovered a 500-gallon still, 800 gallons of moonshine and quantities of sugar, mash, etc., used in distilling operations.

The apparent actual operator they say was "Robert J. Staley." Staley's name appeared frequently in testimony in court Monday and today. He is the man who allegedly rented the farm, paying a year's rent of $500, and signing his name to the agreement. He was said to have been the man who bought the pump for a well dug at the Lawrence Crouse farm which he had rented. He was the man who made arrangements with the well driller, etc.

Referred To As "Southerner"

No one gave an address for Mr. Staley. There was much testimony that he was a "southerner." Tawney said he met Staley when the latter said to have purchased a car and truck from Tawney, paying $100 down and making other payments later. Tawney said the truck found on the farm by liquor control board agents when they raided the place was the one he had sold Staley, but that he had not transferred the ownership pending final payment. He also explained that Staley had given him permission to use the truck when Staley was not using it.

Wanted Horses Here

A number of witnesses placed Tawney at the farm during well drilling operations there last summer. Tawney explained that after becoming acquainted with Staley through the sale of the vehicles, Staley told of the farm he had rented in Straban Twp. and Tawney received permission to stable two race horses he owned there. The race horses, Tawney said, and he felt that by stabling them in Adams County where he could look after them himself he could save money. Staley, Tawney said, had told him he could bring the horses to the barn after the new well was dug and for that reason was interested in the work of getting the well completed and was about the farm on a number of occasions when other witnesses said they saw him there.

John S. Funt, Gettysburg R. 3 well-driller, testified that he had called Tawney after the raid to see about approximately $200 still due on the more than $400 bill for drilling the well. Tawney on November 18, 13 days after the raid, paid the $200, Funt said.

Staley Furnished Money

Tawney said today that when Funt called he had gone in search of Staley. At a bar here he was told that someone had seen Staley at another bar. He went there, found Staley and Staley gave him the $200 to give to Funt.

Tawney said he did not know where Staley lived. He said he was present when bail was arranged for Williams and Shaw because a North Carolina lawyer he knew came up and said someone down south had told him to come here to arrange bail and had asked Tawney to assist him.

Stories Identical

Shaw and Williams told virtually identical stories. They were looking for work and heard people talking about the work available around Gettysburg, "beside President Eisenhower's farm was here and we wanted to see that."

The two, according to their testimony, took a bus to Gettysburg, arrived late Saturday, November 2, and went to the Adams House to get something to eat. They were talking when a man came over

SCHOOL NAME PLEASES IKE

The Gettysburg Joint School Board Monday evening received a letter from the White House acknowledging a notice sent last month of the board's action in naming the new elementary school for the President. In the letter last month, the board had been expressed that the President might be able to attend dedication of the new building on which the board will open bids next week.

Under date of January 30, President Eisenhower replied as follows:

"I am complimented the school board of Gettysburg chose my name for the new elementary school building soon to be built.

"It is of course entirely too early for me to have any idea whether I might be present when dedication ceremonies take place. I suggest that a month or two in advance of the event you again get in touch with my office.

"Again, my appreciation of the action of the school board, and best wishes. Sincerely, Dwight D. Eisenhower."

PLAN BOWLING CENTER WITH 12 MODERN ALLEYS

Daniel J. Wolff, of Gettysburg, and Harold Smallwood, Biglerville, today announced that in the "very early future" construction will begin on a new bowling center to be known as the "Upper Adams Bowling Center."

The new business building will be located one and one-half miles south of Biglerville on the Biglerville-Gettysburg road. It will be constructed of cement blocks, one story high and 60 feet wide and 140 feet long. It will house 12 bowling alleys.

All the alleys will have "fully automatic pin setters and subway ball return, the most modern in bowling alley construction," Wolff emphasized.

The new business is expected to be in operation between August 15 and 20.

Mr. Wolff said that he will continue to conduct his farm machinery business which he has owned and operated since December 1944. Smallwood, a parts manager for Wolff's Farm Machinery Company, will devote "full time to the bowling center." He will attend a special school on the maintenance and operation of the new automatic pin-setting machines.

Self-service Machines

To furnish the "fastest and easiest service" in refreshments Wolff said they will install all self-service machines for beverages and food, such as "hot coffee, hot chocolate, candy bars, sandwiches and the like."

At the front of the building will be a spacious lobby. "There will be ample room elsewhere with stands for spectators and bowlers, lockers and other necessary conveniences and facilities for a modern plant," Wolff said.

The building will be air-conditioned and a standby electric plant will be installed.

There will be lavatories for men and women, individual lockers and bowling balls and bowling shoes will be available for those who are not equipped.

The new building will cost approximately $85,000 Wolff said.

DEAN TELLS OF WORK IN SCOUTS

Dr. W. E. Tilberg, dean emeritus of Gettysburg College, was the guest speaker at the weekly meeting of the Kiwanis Club at Banker's Restaurant Monday evening.

As past chairman of the York-Adams Boy Scout Council he outlined the history of Scouting, stating that Dayton Pyle was the originator of Scouting in 1899. He also pointed out that William Boyce was the first man to bring the Scouting movement to this country from England in 1910. "Today there are four and a half million Scouts and a million men serving in Scout work. In the Black Walnut District there are 834 Scouts and 300 men in Scouting," he said.

"The cost per boy for one year in Scouting is $10 and $15.00 to $20.00 in a correctional institution," he said. The steps open to boys from 12 to 14 and Explorers from 14 to 18 years old were explained.

The need for men to train Scouts was stressed. "The problem is not the boys, they are already here, but what is needed is men to train boys, and get them interested in Scout work," Tilberg said.

The meeting was in charge of the president, Herbert G. Hamme.

COURT DENIES NEW TRIAL IN PITZER ACTION

The Adams County Court Monday afternoon handed down an opinion denying the motion of Pitzer Brothers Battlefield Service Station for a new trial in its action in assumption against Rufus Reaver, local taxi cab operator.

At the original trial a jury found that Reaver did not owe anything to C. David Pitzer, and Frank L. Pitzer, deceased, by Relda Pitzer, administratrix of his estate, trading and doing business at Pitzer Brothers Battlefield Service Station.

C. David Pitzer and Mrs. Relda Pitzer had brought the suit, claiming that Reaver, trading as Reaver's Taxi Cabs, owed the Pitzer Brothers Battlefield Service Station $5,400 for gasoline, etc., furnished the Reaver cabs over a period of years.

Asked New Trial

Reaver denied owing any money, claiming he had paid in full all accounts while doing business with the Pitzer Brothers.

When the jury found in favor of Reaver, the Pitzers sought a new trial contending that the verdict was against the weight of the evidence and against the charge of the court.

In its opinion the court noted that "the parties dealt with each other from 1948 until the plaintiffs discontinued business in July of 1955. The death of Frank L. Pitzer, one of the partners and the person with whom Reaver transacted practically all of his business, occurred in December, 1955."

The court held "the business methods of both parties leave much to be desired and were undoubtedly the cause of the present dispute. The plaintiffs' method of bookkeeping was that they kept a separate book of charge slips for the defendant's business."

"Oral Testimony"

The court held "The plaintiffs have the initial burden of proof, more difficult in this case than ordinarily because of their burden to show the application of payments admittedly made by the defendant. The defendant's case depended upon oral testimony and the jury found in his favor. A new trial should not be granted for a mere conflict of testimony, even if the trial judge would arrive at a different conclusion from the same facts. . . .

The testimony in this case leaves much to be desired and leaves many questions unanswered, but if a new trial were granted the case would have to be submitted to the jury on the same testimony with no assurance that a different result would be reached. Therefore the plaintiffs' motion for a new trial is denied and judgment is directed to be entered on the verdict upon payment of the jury fee."

Sergeant Denies He Gave Yank Secrets To Russia

WASHINGTON (AP)—Sgt. Roy A. Rhodes denied guilt today as he went on trial by court-martial on charges of spying for the Soviet Union.

Rhodes is accused of passing secrets to the Soviet while on duty at the U. S. Embassy in Moscow from 1951 to 1953 and after his return to this country. He admitted contacts with the Russians in a Brooklyn spy trial last year.

But today, in advance of the opening of the court-martial at Ft. Lesley J. McNair, he told reporters he is innocent.

Beside the lanky 40-year-old sergeant was his wife, saying: "I'm here to stand by. He isn't guilty. He was in no position to do it."

Rhodes said the reason he met Russians was that he had only Russian mechanics to deal with while he was chief of the motor pool at the embassy in Moscow. Rhodes made his admission of

Cashtown Fire Co. Fair Grosses $5,500

Cashtown firemen reported receipts of $5,500 at their annual fair Saturday night.

President Clark E. Spence and Auxiliary President Mrs. Kenneth Kuhn expressed the appreciation of the firemen and auxiliary for the support given the program.

The Cashtown firemen also noted that the organization has lost three charter members within the last three weeks: John U. Cook, who died at the age of 97 on January 22; Clarence A. Bream, 82, who had served in the various offices of the fire company and who died February 2; and George A. Carbaugh, who had served as treasurer for many years before retiring several years ago, and who died Saturday.

At the original trial a jury found that Reaver did not owe anything to C. David Pitzer, and Frank L. Pitzer, deceased, by Relda Pitzer, administratrix of his estate, trading and doing business at Pitzer Brothers Battlefield Service Station.

He talked on the Boy Scout program and showed a color motion picture film on the Valley Forge Jamboree. Eighty-four members and guests attended with President Donald A. Ulrich presiding.

Paying special tribute to Lions who are leaders in various phases of the local Boy Scout program, Mr. Rogers identified Roland Kime, Daniel E. Teeter, Dr. William Duck, Harold Ecker, Eugene R. Hartman, Sterling Musselman, Dr. Joseph Riley and John Caldwell in their scouting activities.

Describing the three-phase program for Cubs, Scouts and Explorers, Mr. Rogers said: "In 48 years scouting has learned to issue troop charters for one year at a time, train scout leaders, work with sponsoring organizations and seek the help of the best and busiest men in every community."

Show April 21 And 22

Chairman David Bloser announced the annual Lions' Club show will be given in the high school auditorium Monday and Tuesday, April 21 and 22. He said rehearsals for the charity fund benefit will begin soon after Easter.

A club survey taken during Monday's meeting brought a decision to continue meeting at the Shetter House. The decision was voted by a margin of 62 to 12. No meeting will be held February 24 but reservations were taken for the Heart Association dinner meeting at the high school February 27 when Dr. Paul Dudley White will speak.

President Ulrich said selection likely will be made next Monday of the club's four delegates to the Lions International convention in Chicago July 9-12. Zone Chairman Clair F. BRIGHT DISPLAY OF LIGHTS IN SKY ON MONDAY

Gettysburg and Adams county residents Monday night enjoyed, along with folk in many other parts of the nation, one of the most brilliant displays of "northern lights" seen here in many years. Reaching to the zenith and arching across the northern heavens from northeast to northwest, the display continued for hours.

Aurora Borealis, the Northern Lights, put on a brilliant display over North America last night, the Associated Press reported.

The skies glowed with bright red and pink hues and in some areas green and yellow colors. Radio and TV transmissions and news Teletype wires were affected in the United States and Canada.

Observers in northwestern California saw bright red lights streaming over the top of a low cloud bank. The lights later were reported turned to white.

In Ohio a smoky red band was reported in the skies. It looked like a forest fire over Washington, D.C., and brightly colored red, blue and green flashes were seen over Minneapolis, Minn.

The Northern Lights are caused by streams of particles shot out from the sun. Striking the earth's high atmosphere, they excite atoms of air and cause them to glow.

HEAD OF WHITE HILL TELLS OF SAVING YOUTHS

The observance of "Crime Prevention Week" opened Monday afternoon with a joint assembly at Gettysburg High School presented by the Gettysburg Exchange Club.

The speaker was Arthur T. Prasse, superintendent of White Hill Industrial School and commissioner of the Bureau of Correction of Pennsylvania. Guile W. Lelever, principal of the local high school opened the program, and Carl Prosser, Exchange Club president, introduced Prasse to the student body.

"I have had the privilege of living in an institution with boys and girls from the wrong side of the track for 32 years," Prasse said. "It takes a bigger man to live on the side of the law than it does to oppose the law. One difference about the institution and the outside world is the latter has the freedom to move about outside prison walls."

Lean To Use Skills

"The institution is a gift of the community for the community, just as the police, hospital, and the county jails are. These gifts are an asset to the community if they do the correct job. If a youth is not getting along in society, then the institution tries to redirect his life so he can appreciate the good things, and learn that the good things must be earned by the sweat of his brow."

Prasse said the inmates manufacture their own clothes, grind flour for their bread, launder their clothes and construct buildings.

"If these fellows had put their skills to use before they got into trouble they would never have gone wrong with the law," he said. "One fellow learned the bricklaying trade while in the institution, and before he got his complete pardon in 1957, he had grossed over one million dollars in his own contracting business."

Proud Of Youths

"It really is too bad he had to come to White Hill to find out where he belonged. "I am proud of the youths I live with. We must have institutions for the wise guys, the ones that want to live off of others. These kids are worthwhile but they get 'pig headed.' They have the intelligence, but do not have the initiative to get ahead. Usually 15

Four Juveniles, Aged 10 To 17, Admit Series Of Thefts, Robberies Over 36-Day Period

Borough police announced today the apprehension of four juveniles, one aged 10, two aged 15 and one 17 years old, all of whom admitted a series of robberies and burglaries. They involve breaking into schools, looting automobiles, stealing cars, and other depredations. The alleged violations are said to have taken place between December 31 and February 5.

Rumors had been current in town that local police suspected juveniles and all information was withheld pending full investigation which led to their apprehension. This morning police made the announcement.

(Editor's note: In such matters The Times cooperates with police, borough and state, to help solve the cases).

Series of Thefts

The acts attributed to the youngsters include:

January 15 or thereabout. Broke into the boiler room blow the Acme Store and stole a few cokes. The same night they tried to enter the Meade School, across from the Acme but were unsuccessful.

TEETER TELLS ROTARIANS OF DUTIES OF D. A.

The work of the district attorney's office was outlined by District Attorney Daniel E. Teeter Monday evening at a meeting of the Rotary Club at the YWCA.

After detailing the work of his office, Teeter discussed other law enforcement groups in the county. "Probably best known and best trained are the state police who function includes not only traffic control on the highways, but much work in criminal cases."

"Then in Gettysburg we have a good police force, and a full-time police chief who does a good job in Littlestown. We also have in several of the other communities, Biglerville, Fairfield and Abbotstown, part-time policemen who do good work."

"But for most of the county the state police are the enforcing body, and they have an ever increasing duty to perform."

Sheriff's Duties

"The sheriff and his deputies have certain prescribed duties and in cases of riot and insurrection are called in. But, the sheriff's office is handicapped in that it has no way of paying for investigations which are necessary. In addition the sheriff and deputies are kept pretty busy with the operation of the jail and the serving of papers, sheriff's sales and all the multitude of tasks that have over the year's devolved upon the sheriff."

"There is one field where something might be done legislatively to help solve part of the problem of insufficient policemen. Each voting district has a constable. He could become a sort of local law enforcement official making a regular tour of his district as it were and reporting quarterly to the court. At one time the constables did this, but in recent years that function has declined, mostly, I think, because the constable has been so circumscribed by regulations, and because there is no way for him to be reimbursed for investigative functions he might carry out."

Cities J. P. Work

"We are at the moment at a sort of in-between state. Some think there is too much law as it is, which may be true. Others think there should be more laws and regulations, more law enforcement because we as a nation are rubbing elbows more closely. There are many more of us than there were and so we intrude upon others more."

Teeter described the functions of the justices of the peace and the coroner's jury. "The most important function of the coroner's jury is that it perpetuates the evidence while it is fresh in the minds of the witnesses, and it also provides a chance to study the evidence to determine whether prosecution should follow."

President Dr. Harold Dunkelberger presided at the meeting with 50 present. Frank Bowersox announced that the annual Rotary rummage sale will be held March 28 and 29 in the Hotel Gettysburg press room.

and said from their accents he assumed from the south. He said he also was from the south and that his name was Robert Staley.

Shew and Williams said they told Staley they were about out of money and were looking for work. He invited them to stay at his farm in Staban Twp. over the weekend and said he would help them find employment. Staley, Shew and Williams stayed at the farm Saturday night, November 2, and Sunday, November 3. Sunday night Staley said he had to go "somewhere" and the two young men were to remain until he returned, which he expected to do Monday morning.

Caught Napping

Monday he failed to return, the two young men wondered but remained. Having no place to go they remained there also Monday night. Early the next morning the liquor agents broke into the house and found two young men asleep.

They claimed to have known nothing about the place, and said they never had been outside the house. Asked whether they had looked in boxes containing whiskey they said they felt they were guests and had no right "to snoop."

Tawney said he had never seen the two young men before they were brought before a justice for a hearing. He added in response to questioning that his wife is related to Taft Benton of Gettysburg, who is a relative distant of Williams. Williams said he had not known of the relationship.

VISION DEFECTS IN MANY PUPILS

Nearly a third of the pupils in Gettysburg High School have vision defects but the national average is near 50 per cent, Gettysburg school directors learned Monday night from the monthly report of the school nurses, M. Lucille Brennan and Ellen R. Miller.

MILITARY PARK OBSERVES 63RD BIRTHDAY TODAY

Today marks the 63rd anniversary of the founding of the Gettysburg National Military Park. The congressional bill introduced by General Daniel Sickles was approved by President Cleveland February 11, 1895. The statute provided that three United States would take over the lands of the Gettysburg Battlefield Memorial Association, and would reimburse the association for 800 acres in an amount not to exceed $200,000.

The development of the park was supervised by a commission consisting of one former Confederate and two former Union officers. Colonel John P. Nicholson was chairman and Colonel E. B. Cope was the engineer.

Following Colonel Nicholson's death in 1921, the commission was abolished and Colonel Cope became the first superintendent. He was succeeded by Colonel E. E. Davis in 1927 and Colonel J. F. Barber served from 1932 to 1933.

In 1933 the War Department selected the superintendent from the Civil Service rolls, the first choice being James R. McConaughie.

The military parks were transferred in 1933 to the National Park Service, Department of the Interior, and the administration of the park and cemetery were combined. Mr. McConaughie was transferred to Vicksburg, Mississippi, in 1941 and Dr. J. Walter Coleman was named to succeed him. Dr. Coleman had been superintendent at Vicksburg.

The park has been the scene of many noteworthy events such as the great reunions of 1913 and 1938. Memorial Day services have featured many Presidents and other well known personages. The acquisition of the Cyclorama painting of Pickett's Charge in 1942 was a milestone in park interpretation.

meets more than 500 pupils weekly. The board voted to enroll the joint district in a School Study Council to be conducted in cooperation with the University of Pennsylvania to conduct school studies on a variety of problems and provide guidance in local problems. The membership will cost the district $250 annually. Some school districts belong to several such study councils, the superintendent noted.

To Try Special Police

District Secretary Kenneth G. Reinhart Jr. asked member districts to make tuition payments as soon as possible. The monthly report of the treasurer, the Gettysburg National Bank, showed a balance of $2,966 in the general fund, after expenses last month of $47,276. Tuition payments last month amounted to only $24,000. Bills totaling $6,376 were approved for payment Monday.

After considerable discussion the board approved a Property committee recommendation that three special police be employed to help handle traffic congestion at dismissal time at the Keefeauver and high schools. The tieups caused by the large number of buses and parents' autos causes a real hazard, directors were told. Mr. Riegle described it as "a serious and knotty problem and not one we can talk about and forget."

The Property committee's recommendation had been made after a conference with John O'Brien, driver education instructor at the high school who has been in charge of safety measures on the school grounds.

Okay Driver Training

Superintendent Riegle gave directors a copy of the program for the teachers' meetings to be held Friday on reading, science teaching and the problems of maladjusted pupils. He also invited the directors to attend. Mr. Riegle announced that new school census cards are available and said most districts in the jointure have made plans already for taking of a school census before May 1.

The joint board gave general approval to plans for operating a driver training course next summer under Mr. O'Brien with districts in the jointure to pay for pupils enrolled from the respective districts. Each member board, however, must approve the plan individually. Last year 45 were enrolled and 39 completed the training at a per pupil cost of $19.08. The expense is not reimbursable by the state, it was pointed out.

Look Toward New Budget

Monthly financial statements were distributed to the directors showing that all districts are current with tuition payments excepting Straban and Mt. Joy Townships. Mt. Joy owes $1,797 and Straban $960.

The board gave preliminary approval to a number of recommendations made by the property committee for consideration in budget making for the 1958-59 year involving property improvements, moving a partition and cutting a few doorways in the high school to provide an extra classroom, attention to splintery pine floors at the Meade School an new floors for two basement rooms in the old section of the high school.

All of these items will come up again for final board action when the new budget is acted upon. Cost estimates are to be secured for that purpose.

To Erect Retaining Walls

One recommendation of the property committee was approved for action as soon as weather permits. It involves the election of two foot retaining walls near the base of steep, eroded terraces at the Keefeauver School on either side of the basement entrance.

The board was told a proposal to widen the driveway from Baltimore St. to the high school grounds is being taken up with borough authorities.

The local PTA was given permission to use the Keefeauver all-purpose room for first aid classes opening Wednesday and the county PTA Council got permission to use Keefeauver School May 13 for an officers' school of instruction.

The Band Boosters were granted use of the high school cafeteria March 29 for an REA luncheon and June 10 for meals for the SUV convention.

PTA Observer Present

An extra section of aluminum scaffolding for use at the high school was ordered.

Dr. Clarence Bartholomew attended the meeting as an observer for the PTA.

The monthly report of the Athletic Fund showed a balance of $672 after expenses of $408 and receipts of $670 in the last month. The current balance in the Activities Fund was given as $12,423. Letters of appreciation were read from the three teachers who attended the Temple University reading clinic last month and from Miss Grace Sachs, a retired teacher, for last Thursday's dinner invitation and gift.

Dr. R. D. Wickerham, board president, presided and announced a special meeting February 19 to open bids on the new grade school building.

The meeting adjourned at 10:15 p.m.

CHOU EN-LAI IS RELIEVED OF 1 RED CHINA JOB

HONG KONG (AP)—Peiping radio announced today that Chou En-lai has been "relieved" as Communist China's foreign minister on his own recommendation. The broadcast said he retained his post as premier.

Vice Premier Chen Yi was appointed to succeed Chou as foreign minister.

The actions were taken at a plenary session of the National People's Congress, which began meeting in the Red Chinese capital yesterday.

The Red radio said Chen Yi would continue to hold his office as a vice premier. He also is a marshal in the Chinese army.

The broadcast said: "The National People's Congress in a decision at its plenary session this afternoon appointed Vice Premier Chen Yi concurrently foreign minister on the recommendation of Premier Chou En-lai."

"The premier was relieved of his concurrent post as minister of foreign affairs."

Chen Yi has been a rising star in the Peiping hierarchy since 1955.

His 3rd Field Army was first over the Yangtze River and first into Shanghai during the Red conquest which drove Chiang Kai-shek to Formosa. For a while he was shunted into relative obscurity as military mayor of Shanghai, then in 1955 was named a vice premier under Chou.

In April 1956 he was named head of a new national anti-illiteracy association, assigned to step up the lagging campaign to teach China's 400 million illiterates to read and write.

WHY WRANGLE?

When I think of human wrangling I always have pictured the incident of a dog carrying a healthy bone to some safe retreat for a future feast, whereupon he was attacked by another dog, the bone being dropped in the process — meanwhile the fight going on. Also, meanwhile, another dog running off with the bone!

I have never known anything good to come out of wrangles. And I speak with some little authority, because I have been in them myself.

But how foolish — how energy eating it is to wrangle. If people attained anything from it, then I could believe that wrangling should become one of the useful arts.

Long ago I decided that the only useful wrangle in the world is the personal wrangle. That is, if things do not go right, the only person worth wrangling with is one's self, where the trouble starts.

In this connection, far be it from one so unlearned as I to make an international suggestion, but it has always appeared to me that if the great statesmen — the world over — would agree on peace first, and fight out their personal feuds afterward, everybody would be so much happier — and the axle grease of the entire world would not be clogged so heavily as it now is.

What's the use of wrangling?

Tomorrow Mr. Adams Will Talk on the subject: "Purpose."

A TOAST

Here's to woman! For her we toil,
For her build structures to the skies;
For her we burn the midnight oil
And strive at last to win life's prize.

Without her, who would care to chase
The will o' wisp of fame, or seek
The plaudits of the human race,
Or who would climb the mountain peak?

Here's to woman! For her we hate,
For her we envy and despise;
For her we brave the sternest fate;
For her we speak truths and often lies;

For her we clothe ourselves, At times,
Go poorly clad for her sweet sake;
Perform good deeds and sometimes crimes;
For her we mend our ways or break.

Here's to woman! the source of all
Our hopes and fears, our every plan;
For her we rise, for her we fall,
It is the woman makes the man.

And so, I raise my glass tonight
And unto woman this toast give:
It is for her we daily fight,
It is for her we strive to live.

Lawyer Lincoln For The Defense

By CARL C. HODGES

(SECOND INSTALLMENT)

This story goes back to May 1858, a few months before Abraham Lincoln and Stephen Douglas staged their historic series of debates in the Illinois senatorial campaign. Kidding the circuit of courts in Illinois counties, Lincoln had risen as lawyer to a position where he earned substantial fees in cases involving the International Harvester Co. and Illinois Central R. R. But when the son of an old friend got into trouble, Lincoln dropped everything else to go to Beardstown to assist in the boy's defense without fee.

The young defendant, Duff Armstrong, is charged with murder with a slung-shot during a drunken brawl at an evangelist's camp meeting. One of Duff's companions has already been convicted of murder. As the narrative continues today, the problem of winning the boy's acquittal, which Lincoln has promised Duff's mother, has been compounded by news that the state's attorney has located Charles Allen, a missing witness against Armstrong.

CHAPTER II

Heat rose in waves from parched and brittle grass in the public square. Teams of horses and spans of mules had been ground-bitched and foraged standing up. Dust swirled in the narrow street from the passage of late-coming wagons. Screaming children played in the wagon boxes, shinnied up trees, played games on the dying and slippery grass.

Abe Lincoln came down the street, paused a moment under the overhanging porch of the general store. He looked in, smiled at a dozing clerk behind the counter. Next door, the livery stable man was forking hay into feed boxes. Every stall was full. Men had ridden from Virginia, Ashland, even Petersburg, to be in Beardstown on this day.

There was a murder trial! Fight For A Life
Lincoln shifted the misshapen leather portfolio under his arm, ambled to the corner. Across the dusty road, every window in the courthouse was raised. Inside each window on both floors he could glimpse the movement of men and women. A solid mass of men lined both sides of the building; along the side on Virginia Road and down the street that led through the Illinois River bottoms to Meredosia. It was reckoned that the smartest legal brains in Illinois would be here this day. Abe Lincoln of Sangamon County, who was talked of for senator against Steve Douglas, was one. The book lawyers would be fighting, one side or another, for the life of Duff Armstrong.

Lincoln stepped up on the curb, moved through the tight press of men who greeted him with proud or jocular familiarity, or eyed him with curiosity. He entered the building, walked down the towering corridor that split the lower floor, climbed the enclosed stairway at the back.

Courtroom Is Crowded
This led him into the courtroom on the second floor. The benches were jammed with people; some of the women sucked babes in arms. The window sills were filled with seated men; others stood in a sweating mass around the walls.

A desk and a table behind a rail was a desk and above it on the wall a United States flag with thirty stars. There was a pottery pitcher of water for the judge, who had not appeared. On each side of the judge's dais were clusters of six chairs each for the jury. In front of the judge's dais was a table for the clerk of court and a longer one for the legal counsel.

Lincoln sat down behind the table, putting his top hat and his portfolio on top of it. There was a stronger murmur of sound then. The sheriff came in from a back room with Duff Armstrong at his side and set him down beside Lincoln. And then came William Walker and Lyman Lacey, who had defended Jim Norris at Havana, and were to help Lincoln defend Armstrong.

William Walker said, "I object, your honor. My client hasn't been convicted. Unless counsel is taking over the functions of jury and judge."

Lincoln gave his sad smile to the boy.

"Did they find Allen?"

Duff swallowed, looked around the crowded courtroom nervously. "Did they find Allen?"

Lincoln nodded. "They found him in Virginia and brought him back. He'll testify. For the state."

Armstrong's face grew even paler. "That ain't good."

There was a stronger murmur of sound. Hannah Armstrong, on the arm of her younger son, came down the aisle and took chairs that had been reserved for them in the front row.

Hugh Fullerton, the state's attorney, appeared accompanied by Henry Shaw, a beardstown lawyer. Then the members of the jury filed in and took their places, looking self-conscious and mighty important. The judge appeared at a door, strode to his dais and sat down. After nodding to the lawyers and the clerk, he banged his gavel, then he gestured at Fullerton. "You can open, Hugh. State your case."

Fullerton rose to his full height, elaborately shot his cuffs from the sleeves of his coat, and strode from one set of jurors to another. He was sure of himself; why not? Jim Norris had been convicted at Havana with ease. The defendant, Duff Armstrong, all 140 pounds of him, was dejected enough to convince Fullerton that he expected to hang.

Abe Lincoln, watching, admired Fullerton's stage presence, his stirring words. But Lincoln was actually paying little attention to the sense of the state's attorney's remarks. His own problems of defense of a pre-judged and preconvicted prisoner were uppermost in his mind. He could produce witnesses by the dozens to prove that Duff Armstrong worshipped his mother and loved horses and was a little rowdy at times and probably drank too much but was certainly not the type to commit a murder.

What good would a hundred such witnesses do?

He put his mind to the problem until a murmur from the crowd disturbed him as Fullerton soared into a flight of oratory. Then he studied the state's attorney and paid more heed to Fullerton's words.

"Despicable Crime"

"... and so," Fullerton was saying, in his booming voice, "on the night of August 29 last year, James Metzker was attacked by one James Norris and the defendant, William 'Duff' Armstrong, who is in this courtroom today, on trial for his life. The defendant, his friends, his family, his attorneys realize that he will be brought to ultimate justice for his despicable crime. They have left no stone unturned to circumvent justice. They have dug still deeper into their bag of tricks and hired the estimable Abraham Lincoln to devote his considerable talents to the defense of this murderer."

William Walker said, "I object, your honor. My client hasn't been convicted. Unless counsel is taking over the functions of jury and judge."

Lincoln gave his sad smile to the boy.

Duff swallowed, looked around the crowded courtroom nervously. "Did they find Allen?"

Lincoln gave his sad smile to the boy.

"Did they find Allen?"

Duff swallowed, looked around the crowded courtroom nervously. "Did they find Allen?"

Lincoln nodded. "They found him in Virginia and brought him back. He'll testify. For the state."

Armstrong's face grew even paler. "That ain't good."

There was a stronger murmur of sound. Hannah Armstrong, on the arm of her younger son, came down the aisle and took chairs that had been reserved for them in the front row.

Hugh Fullerton, the state's attorney, appeared accompanied by Henry Shaw, a beardstown lawyer. Then the members of the jury filed in and took their places, looking self-conscious and mighty important. The judge appeared at a door, strode to his dais and sat down. After nodding to the lawyers and the clerk, he banged his gavel, then he gestured at Fullerton. "You can open, Hugh. State your case."

Fullerton rose to his full height, elaborately shot his cuffs from the sleeves of his coat, and strode from one set of jurors to another. He was sure of himself; why not? Jim Norris had been convicted at Havana with ease. The defendant, Duff Armstrong, all 140 pounds of him, was dejected enough to convince Fullerton that he expected to hang.

Abe Lincoln, watching, admired Fullerton's stage presence, his stirring words. But Lincoln was actually paying little attention to the sense of the state's attorney's remarks. His own problems of defense of a pre-judged and preconvicted prisoner were uppermost in his mind. He could produce witnesses by the dozens to prove that Duff Armstrong worshipped his mother and loved horses and was a little rowdy at times and probably drank too much but was certainly not the type to commit a murder.

What good would a hundred such witnesses do?

He put his mind to the problem until a murmur from the crowd disturbed him as Fullerton soared into a flight of oratory. Then he studied the state's attorney and paid more heed to Fullerton's words.

"Despicable Crime"

"... and so," Fullerton was saying, in his booming voice, "on the night of August 29 last year, James Metzker was attacked by one James Norris and the defendant, William 'Duff' Armstrong, who is in this courtroom today, on trial for his life. The defendant, his friends, his family, his attorneys realize that he will be brought to ultimate justice for his despicable crime. They have left no stone unturned to circumvent justice. They have dug still deeper into their bag of tricks and hired the estimable Abraham Lincoln to devote his considerable talents to the defense of this murderer."

William Walker said, "I object, your honor. My client hasn't been convicted. Unless counsel is taking over the functions of jury and judge."

Lincoln gave his sad smile to the boy.

"Did they find Allen?"

Duff swallowed, looked around the crowded courtroom nervously. "Did they find Allen?"

Lincoln nodded. "They found him in Virginia and brought him back. He'll testify. For the state."

300 AT BLUE AND GOLD BANQUET MONDAY NIGHT

Approximately 300 were in attendance at the annual Blue and Gold Cub Scout dinner Monday evening in the all purpose room of the Rolling Acres Elementary School on East Myrtle St., when 12 Cubs received the Webelos, highest award in Cubbing. Other special awards were presented.

Webelos badges were received by John Burger, James Long, Spencer Reaver, Terry Reynolds, Gregory Smith, Timothy Stites, Richard Maitland, Ronald Ruggles, David Byers, Paul Bowman, Terry Morelock and Robert Horner. The badges were presented by Assistant Scoutmaster James P. Hanlon, who has been supervising the Webelos Den training since its inception here three years ago, and who tomorrow night at the Boy Scout Court of Honor will see two of his Webelos graduates receive the rank of Eagle Scout, the highest award in Boy Scouting. Special recognition was given Assistant Scoutmaster Hanlon by all the leaders in attendance last evening.

Weigand Speaks

Guest speaker was Ray Weigand, York, chief Scout executive of the York-Adams Area Council, who prefaced his message with the remark that "as long as you maintain this interest," speaking to the parents, "you will have juveniles in this community, and you will not need to add the word 'delinquent.'" Mr. Weigand stated that Cubbing came into being in 1931, the result of the request of 13,500 church leaders of all faiths, school teachers and other interested persons from the grass roots of America. He traced the various ages of boys from the "wee" age up to three years; the knee age from 3 to 6; the see age, from 6 to 9; the "me" age from 9 to 12; the "we" age from 12 to 15; the "she" age from 15 to 18 to the free age from 18 to 21. He spoke directly to the parents and then devoted a portion of his message to the Cub Scouts themselves. He concluded his remarks by stating: "Cubbing, which is an informal, educational operation can be family fun," and he praised the leadership in the community organization.

Give Scouter's Trophy

A special Scouter's trophy was presented to Cubmaster Long as a surprise to assistant Cubmaster Beaven F. Hanlon, who has served in this capacity for the past years, and who retired from the pack last evening. The inscription on the statuette was "Beaven Hanlon, in appreciation for faithful and untiring service; Cub Pack 84, Littlestown, 1950-1958." An eight-year pin was also presented to Mr. Hanlon.

Charles E. Ritter, chairman of the Boy Scout Troop Committee, presented an award to Cubmaster Long, who received it for the pack, to be placed on the pack charter and also a ribbon to accompany the seal. The award was for having achieved 75 per cent of the goal in the God and Country award. Mr. Ritter stated that two of the eleven awards in the 28 scout organizations in the Black Walnut District have been received in Littlestown.

The pledge of allegiance was led by Boy Scouts Robert Hahn. Grace was said by the Rev. William A. Boyle, pastor of St. Aloysius Catholic Church.

Following the meal, group singing was led by Cubmaster Long, with the Cubs singing "Cub Scouting We Will Go" and the group singing "The More We Get Together." The Cubmaster explained the candle lighting ceremony which took place as each group of awards in the Wolf, Bear, Lion and Webelos category was presented. Hanlon Speaks

Assistant Scoutmaster John R. Rudisill accepted the Cub who were graduated to Boy Scouting. He congratulated them on this achievement and invited them to attend the Boy Scout Court of Honor in the high school cafeteria at 7:30 p.m. Wednesday, when they will be officially welcomed.

Assistant Cubmaster Hanlon spoke briefly concerning pack business, after extending thanks to the American Legion Color Guard. He noted that subscriptions to the "Boy's Life," official Boy Scout magazine, should be given to the den mothers by February 25, in order to take advantage of the special rate. In addition to the den mothers needed, any men willing to serve on the Pack committee, were invited to contact Cubmaster Long. He also thanked the present pack committee for their "excellent cooperation" and announced that the service pins not presented to the boys during the award ceremony, which were ordered but not received, will reach them through their den mothers.

Omit Some Den Meetings

Cubmaster Long called the attention of the group to the handicraft and safety display arranged for Boy Scout Week by the Cub Pack, in the show windows at the telephone exchange on South Queen St. The evening's festivities concluded with the traditional song "Good Night Cub Scouts."

Members of each of the eight dens of the Pack, together with their den mothers and leaders, were seated together at eight tables and the speakers table was arranged on the stage. The menu was provided by the parents of the individual dens. Each den also had its own centerpiece and favors, the latter

Ex-Wife Causing Street New Trouble

LOS ANGELES (AP) — David Street, five-times-married singer, has been accused by his first wife of lagging in child support payments.

Mrs. Mary Payne, 32, said in Superior Court yesterday that the 37-year-old singer was $4,845 in arrears in payments for support of their son David Jr., 14.

made at one of the weekly den meetings.

It is customary for the weekly den meetings to be omitted when there is a pack gathering. Parents should check with the den mothers before sending their boys to den meetings this week, as some of them will not be held.

Judge Elmer Doyle granted Street a three-month continuance so he could try to reach a settlement with Mrs. Payne, now the wife of a Long Beach, Calif., salesman.

Street's other ex-wives are actresses Mary Beth Hughes, Lois Andrews and Sharon Lee. He now is married to actress Debra Paget.

Delighted Students Pay Buzzing Fine

PORTSMOUTH, England (AP) — Joseph Stubbington, a 17-year-old student pilot, pleaded guilty to buzzing the school he attends. Witnesses said his rented plane missed the roof by a foot. Delighted by all the excitement, schoolmates took up a collection to pay Stubby's 10-pound ($28) fine for low and dangerous flying.

REP. MOULDER RESIGNS HOUSE JOB IN PROTEST

WASHINGTON (AP) - Rep. Moulder (D-Mo.), voicing disappointment at the ouster of counsel Bernard Schwartz, resigned today as chairman of a quarelling House subcommittee investigating federal regulatory agencies.

Moulder said he couldn't go along with the firing of Schwartz, whom he described as "outstanding, courageous and conscientious."

He said he found himself powerless as chairman because of "dissension and disagreement" among the 11 members, and was submitting his resignation to Chairman Harris (D-Ark.) of the parent House Commerce Committee. He said he will continue as a subcommittee member.

Voted 7-4 For Firing
The subcommittee voted 7-4 to get rid of Schwartz after a majority of the group complained of tactics used by the 34-year-old former law school professor in his investigation of the Federal Communications Commission.

Schwartz, quizzed by the subcommittee for three hours, contended most of the members wanted a "whitewash" of the probe. He said his investigation involved intervention in agency affairs by Sherman Adams, chief White House aide, and other top administration officials.

But Harris said Schwartz "has had an improper attitude. He has shown lack of cooperation with the committee . . . and has made some very serious charges against the committee."

To Continue Probe
Harris said the investigation will proceed.

Moulder commented that "I favor a good hard-hitting investigation."

He said he "definitely" believed the group should pursue an investigation into whether Adams had any connection with FCC cases.

He disagreed with Schwartz's contention that a whitewash was in the works.

Charged "Whitewash"
Schwartz told reporters: "I charged directly to their face that a majority of the members of the subcommittee were interested only in a whitewash - interested only in squelching the investigation."

"If the committee wouldn't constantly shoot me in the back I could carry on," he added.

Rep. John Bell Williams (D-Miss.), a subcommittee member, said anyone making charges that the committee was out for a whitewash "is a deliberate liar."

Williams said no member of the group had indicated he wished that any information withheld from the public or that any phase of the investigation should not proceed.

Harris said Schwartz had acknowledged that, in the presence of several people in Schwartz's office last week, he had said, "They could convict me for contempt of Congress for I have nothing but contempt for most of the members of this committee."

DEMAND ACTION TO PUT BRAKES ON TRADE SLUMP

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government announces new figures today on unemployment in the current business slump amid demands from Capitol Hill for faster action to boost the economy.

Sen. Douglas (D-Ill.) predicted in advance that the Commerce Department report would list 4½ million unemployed for January, and he called this too short a count.

Douglas said the report traditionally does not include the number of workers whose working hours — and pay checks — have been reduced by declining production volume. He predicted a Senate-Economic Committee analysis will show this could be translated as equivalent to at least another million unemployed, "counting two men working a half day each as equivalent to one man unemployed for one day."

The Meets Officials President Eisenhower met privately with four of the government officials most directly concerned with the economy. He made no announcement of what he had discussed with Secretary of the Treasury Anderson, Chairman Federal Reserve Board, Chairman Raymond Saulnier of the President's Council of Economic Advisers, and Dr. Gabriel Hauge, Eisenhower's personal economic adviser.

The White House meeting came on the heels of a request from the Economics Committee for a report by Monday on what new steps the administration may be planning to check the business downturn and get more men and women back to work.

The committee's chairman, Rep. Patman (D-Tex.), has accused the administration of failing to move as effectively as he says it should to attack the slump.

Douglas, contending "the danger point in the recession has been reached" and that it could slip into a full-scale depression, introduced bills proposing a $4, 400,000,000 tax cut this year as a pump-priming device. He said his bills would benefit primarily persons in the lower income tax brackets, and individual consumers.

LEAVES STATE POST
HARRISBURG (AP) — Joseph L. Donnelly, Scranton, has resigned his $8,580 a year job as a deputy attorney general to take a legal position with the Pennsylvania Power and Light Co. at Allentown. His resignation was effective last Friday.

PROBE $200,000 FIRE NEAR YORK

YORK, Pa. (AP) — The state fire marshal today probed a $200,000 fire, possibly fed by bottled gas supplies, that raced through a row of stores in nearby Jacobus.

Leveled were a women's apparel shop, a haberdashery, a sporting goods store, a household appliance shop and a bottled gas distributor. Also damaged were a warehouse, two apartments and the borough's post office.

They were located in three brick and concrete buildings owned by Bruce V. Smith who was out of town during the fire on Sunday. Jacobus is on U.S. 111, five miles south of York.

The only injuries reported were to unidentified persons, one of whom was scratched on the head by a falling ladder. The other was burned on the foot, reportedly from a flaming bottle.

The bottled gas and ammunition in the sporting goods store posed a constant threat during the conflagration. Eight York County fire companies fought the blaze in 10 degree cold and high winds.

The S. S. United States, a 53,300 ton steel-hulled liner, was built for double duty when launched in 1952. It is a luxury ship in peace, but can be quickly converted into a giant troop transport.

Reporter Helps To Capture Escapée

YORK, Pa. (AP) — Robert James Cook, 27, an escapee from the federal penitentiary at Lewisburg, was recaptured here Saturday night with the help of a newspaper reporter.

Cook, of nearby Dover R.D. 1, was spotted in downtown York by Donald T. Renwick, police reporter for the Lancaster Sunday News.

Renwick called the police, who apprehended Cook minutes later in a hotel lobby.

Cook escaped from the Lewisburg prison farm Friday night. He was serving a year and a day term for parole violation and mail theft.

LINDENWOLD, N. J. (AP) — Fire Sunday night destroyed the St. Lawrence Catholic Church on the White Horse Pike here, about 15 miles south of Camden.

Police later arrested a 15-year-old boy who they said admitted starting the fire accidentally.

Barrington, R. I., was once partly owned by Captain Miles Standish of the Pilgrim colony.
